Leia mais Aug 24, 2015 howtheygottoyou 7383628160 First, I'd like to commend you on a well-written, nicely formatted story. I really enjoyed reading it. Your English is excellent, as is the formatting. One thing I noticed: I've never seen two sentences in a row cross-linked in a Wiki. If you're reading from the admin console, you probably have an RSS feed that auto-updates, or you can see the latest edit on your dashboard. In any case, you should probably be editing the style sheet instead of writing in the actual Wiki. The style sheet is used to control all the formatting of the articles. You can see it here: When submitting a post, a "Preview" field below the submit button will update to show the latest edit. If you see nothing, but you're editing the "Slug", then you may be going over the 250 character limit. If you continue to have issues, feel free to ask about it on meta. We have volunteers to help you out, but it takes someone with the right skill set to help you with specialties like this. Hope this helps. Also, you can tag all the post-2000 comments with [HUN] with this template: Additionally, you should be aware that the DNS record for stackoverflow.com is stackoverflow.com.HUN; that's what we use to point to the Stack Overflow subdomain. If you want to find the DNS records for the main domain go to: When you want to create a new subdomain, create a new zone in the domain name, and create a DNS entry for it. If you'd like the main domain to point to the subdomain, do the reverse — create a zone in the subdomain (our example is stackoverflow.com.HUN) and create a DNS entry for it in the main domain. When you create a new zone, you have the option to create a DNS delegation (which is what
